Neanderthal Binoculars

Who would have thought that
A Victorian air brick
Ravaged by the tides of life
Would masquerade as an optical solution
On the back beach wanting to get a better view of the Golden Cap?

The story so far...
Red terracotta bricks with even holes
Are rounded at the edges
And reduced to snippets of pieces
With imaginary lenses
Spaced perfectly to accommodate
The eyes of a stone age baby.

Looking through these holes
Once meant for air
Show us how to see
More clearly
Through time
